Course Description and Course Note:	HUMAN 105 is an interdisciplinary, intercultural course designed to challenge students to further develop critical reading, writing, and thinking abilities through comparative study of materials from literature and various disciplines. Students evaluate some of the most relevant issues faced by people of the United States and other cultures throughout history, with emphasis on values and ethics. The course examines the creative impulses and destructive forces that have influenced the human struggle for order, acceptance, knowledge, understanding, self expression, power, freedom, individuality and survival. Students improve their abilities to analyze, synthesize, develop original ideas, distinguish fact from opinion or belief, and use logic and reason in language and thought to determine whether the solutions of the past are compatible with the problems of today and tomorrow. Writing instruction focuses on improving advanced composition skills. The course may be team-taught.

Out of Class Assignments

- Critical thinking focused essays (e.g. derive a thesis on the importance of quasi-religion and hero-worship in our current culture. Analyze elements of hero-worship in a quasi-religious experience you have recently had. Support your thesis with ideas and examples from selected conceptual, scholarly, and other readings, connections and contrasts to either Gilgamesh or Prometheus, and a detailed account of your experience at the entertainment or sports event you attended or watched)

- Creative assignments (e.g. using three philosophers and activists discussed in this course such as Touissant L'Ouverture, Jorge Louis Borges, and Mary Wollstonecraft create a talk-show formatted script in which the speakers engage in a conversation about the 21st century technologies such as the internet as a tool of information and resistance)
- Journals and informal writing (e.g. create a double-entry journal in which you find key quotes from the play M. Butterfly and connect them to concepts of love discussed in all about love: New Visions by bell hooks and other philosophies of love discussed in this class)
- Individual or group projects (e.g. select one of the Eightfold Path elements from Buddhist teachings as addressed in class. Show how you, as a Buddhist, would apply this element's principles to your life in our current society using scholarly, conceptual, and other readings from the course)
